

„Media and urban aspirations among Twelver Shi‘i Muslims in Mumbai“

Patrick Eisenlohr
Centre for Modern Indian Studies
University of Göttingen

Patrick Eisenlohr heads the research group "Society and Culture in Modern India" at the Centre for Modern Indian Studies (CeMIS) in Göttingen. He completed his PhD in anthropology at the University of Chicago in 2001. From 2001 to 2007 he was assistant professor of anthropology at Washington University in St. Louis, he held an appointment as visiting professor at New York University in 2004, and from 2008 to 2014 he was professor of cultural anthropology at Utrecht University.

Patrick Eisenlohr has worked on a range of issues in linguistic anthropology and the anthropology of media, especially on language, religion, and citizenship, language and diaspora, as well as religion and media.

Together with other members of the research group "Society and Culture in Modern India" he addresses questions of religious and ethnic diversity in contemporary India and in Indian diasporas, with a particular emphasis on urban contexts and its transnational ramifications.
