GOVERNANCE ISSUES IN ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: A CHINA-INDIA PERSPECTIVE

Prof. Pranab Bardhan, Department of Economics,
University of California, Berkeley

Going beyond the usual simplistic authoritarianism-democracy distinction in the China-India comparative discussion, the lecture will discuss in detail issues of internal organization of government, abuse of governance and corruption, and decentralized structures and practices in the two countries.

Pranab Bardhan is Professor of the Graduate School at the Department of Economics at the University of California, Berkeley. He holds a PhD degree from Cambridge University and had previously been on the faculty of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the Indian Statistical Institute and the Delhi School of Economics.

The lecture will be followed by a reception.
